Hi Kelly:

Thank you for writing your thoughtful and optimistic blog about the election. I must say that many of your thoughts echo my own, but your perspective on it and your tie to the bible are a reminder that this power play has happened many times before and it has been overcome. Thanks for sharing this and your message of love for everyone. I know many people who are taking your message to heart and fighting for that love to be spread; that's the most important ~~key~~ thing.

Thank you for your comment. My great grandma always told me many things. But this one thing stuck with me. My grandma said when you die leave this world. How would you want to be remembered as and for. Leave a legacy on earth that your children, ~~children~~ the next generation and the generation after that can follow. My great grandma Ada was a loving Christian woman. She was a giver - help anyone, and brought unity with everyone in the family, church and community. This is my icon that I follow behind daily.
