

Reply ID: ubv8

@mkd16

You wrote

This was thoughtful and beautiful post, thank you. I've added the book you mentioned to my reading list. I really appreciated how you summarized the key points. That's exactly what I do when I read a thought-provoking book too! Best MKD.

Thank you for your kind words. I love to read and talk about the things I have overcome. Why do I like to do those things. I can learn through someone else who has already overcome the career I am trying to overcome. Someone else who is going through the same thing I have overcome - I can help them. I often tell people our answers to our problems are right ~~under~~ in eyesight. Our answer could be with the person sitting next ~~to~~ to you or in a book. This is a true story. I've shared it with many people. I was moving back to Georgia from New Jersey in the 1993. I just had my baggages and cent an amount of cash on me. I took the greyhound bus, which took 22 hours to get to my destination in Georgia. So I failed to sleep on the bus. Because I was tired. Riding the greyhound bus is to lock it with

Reply ID: 46v8 @ middle

The layover. I got to Baltimore, MD. We had a two hour layover so. I was like I am surely hungry. So I said I am going to walk over in get me some burger King. I was under my burger and fries. The cashier rung it my order. I reached into my pocket. Guess what no cash. Someone had picked my pocket while I was sleep. I was getting all upset but more so scared because I still have long way to get where I was going. So this lady tap me said I have you. She paid for my food. Then she said we was on the same bus. She says to me where are you coming from I said Fort Dix, NJ. She said that is strange because ~~that~~ that is where I am station at in the army. I said what is your position she MP. I said my stepmom work at MP station and she is in the army. I be on the base all the time I have never seen you. So make a long story short. She said she had the same exact to happen to ~~her~~ her traveling on the bus with her money. She says I put it in my bra now. My answer to my problems was right there.

Be Bless
and Take Care