

LETTERS FROM BEYOND THE BARS.

Those of you who stumble across this wonder why we reach out to you? why we seem so desperate just to hear from the outside world. because in here we've been cut off by everything we care about and love. life seems to have stopped and in my own personal perspective it's what's kept my sanity, given me hope, inspiration from you all. some for a short while and others not giving up on me and moving on with their lives and yes this does have an affect on me because sometimes after awhile you become a friend and not just a pen pal.

I always look forward to your responses your questions or inquiries. look forward to making a new friend no matter the distance between and even the part of sharing my personal experiences my hopes, my dreams, and ambitions. i've made it my personal point during my incarceration not to lose the inner person i am.

so i'm extending this invitation once again to welcome you to write and share a part of you. it's not a hard thing to do the hardest part is just picking up the pen!:)

i'll be looking forward to it. also for those who've kept up with my story, it won't be long and i'll be starting my truck driving class!!!
i'm really quite excited! counting down two months!
