

Dear Sue,

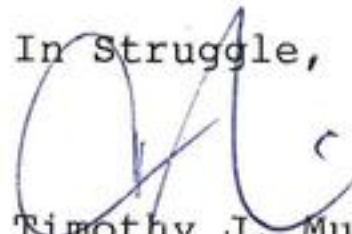

Thank you so much for reading and commenting. I am honored to have an English professor reviewing my work. I apologize for my lack of formal education, but I have learned that words have power and can be used as a powerful tool for change. Poetry was something very far from me for years, but my heart opened to it when I worked for healing and personal change.

I'd like to meet and talk about some possible writing projects for incarcerated persons. Is this something you may consider? Please let me know. I have some good references if you need them and I can assure you that any project we could offer would be worthwhile and taken seriously. Please contact me directly at;
