Hello Alyssa, its good to hear you read and the things i post on my blog...

(ANSWERS)

1). Ways men deal with missing women in prison? Truth is, there is no real way to deal with life without you beautiful women. You have a lotta guys who put themselves on websites to meet women, as well as write other ~~males~~ females in prison or so-call friends of other inmates. But its truly hard not having a women companionship or hearing your voices, or smellings you scent or touching your bodies. There is nothing that can be done to replace a women.

2). Do i believe men change not being around women? Of course, See what happens now is you have a group of guys with unrelease energy and built up tensions with no way to release it but threw aggression and playing with yourself. You also have those guys who turn to other men to satisfy their needs (to each their own).

3). How does this affect men once their released? well, being confined for years without the opportunity to conversate, and converse with a women can in fact affect a man once he's free. He may not know how to approach a woman, and may fear that she may reject him. This may also affect his commitment issues do to the fact that he feels that he was rejected or denied everything that comes with being with a women, so once free he just go after every women he can get hold to.

4). How do men deal with their needs? I mean its really plan and simple. you have those who play with themselves, others who like other men, and then you have guys who write poetry, music, and pay for websites.

5). Do i believe men become more reserved or don't know how to deal with a womens "touch" when released?

See this question to me really depends on the individual. So for me i'd be more reserved do to the fact that i've spent years alone and learn'd how to control my urges. Now in fact having a womens touch may after all these years ~~may~~ be more passionate and i would allow myself to relax. But its always a chance of fear that i may not do things right or even that i may hurt you do to all the built up tension. But i believe if you have a women who cherishes you as much as you cherish her she'll guide you threw everything.

I do like your unique questions, and hope you ask me more for i have alotta Answers to give.
