Dear Mystery Woman:

I'll double-space this so you can read it more easily.

That was a very entertaining message you sent me. I hope I don't disappoint you by saying I have no idea who you might be. As best as I can remember, I must have known you right before (or right after) I was sent to the Boy's School in 1970.

If you really want me to guess who you are, you'll have to give me better clues - like where you went to school before you dropped out, where we met, what part of Madison you lived in, where we went together.

I don't think you're crazy. You sound like you're suffering from sleep deprivation. You should read the book (or get the audio version), "Sleeping Your Way to the Top," by David Brown. Donald Trump behaves erratically because he is chronically sleep-deprived. I think if you could get some sleep you would see the world differently.

Thanks for reading my blog.

Toodles :)
