Jae,

Peace and Blessings. Peace is one of the most greatest blessings we can have in our lives. However, it seems to be less prevalent, because of the fast pace and chaoticness of our world and lives. So moments of peace is a vague attainment lost in this atmosphere of unbalance. This is why I wish peace for you, and hope that you will always be embrace by it and achieve the Nirvanas of life.

Your words and comments were very kind, and it gave me a abundance of joy to know that you enjoy my writings. I don't get many replies, so the little I do get, I cherish them. Sometimes I wonder do people enjoy my writings. But then I don't dwell on it much because I don't write for the pleasure of pleasing people, But the pleasure of expression, and the pleasure of sharing my thoughts with people. My expression is my own individualism. Being me is a unique quality I think I have, and I show the same to others. So, thank-you for accepting me. I don't know much about you, but I accept you with all the unknowns?

Subjective outlooks. So there isn't really any right or wrong. But the question is, can we accept the opposites? Or do we close our minds and get lost in the realms of vagueness. Sometimes the serendipitous moments of our lives can come from something opposite of our ~~real~~ perceptions. All and All, thank-you for reaching out to me with the hand of compassion, and I shake it with gratitude.

However, I am just curious to know why you were searching for a Asian inmate in prison? I know you've said you have a friend that was sentenced to 24 years. But still I am curious? Whatever the reasons, I hope this is not just a breeze that just passed by. If you ever have any questions or just want to express your thoughts and mind you can reach me at my blog or you can reach ^{me} at this address to:
