

USE OF LETHAL CHEMICALS: A Disgrace to Humanity

OJORE MCKINNON

Days after the April 4, 2017 allege chemical weapon attack on Syrian civilians, White House Press Secretary, Sean Spicer, unflinchingly portrayed Hitler and the nazis as more humane than Syrian President Bashir Al Assad, stating, "...not even Hitler and the nazis used chemical weapons during World War II," in an attempt to denigrate Assad. Likewise, during that same press conference he falsely stated the U.S. regime has not used chemical weapons since World War I (WWI); clearly in an attempt to portray the regime as the standard of decency.

Keep in mind, Sean Spicer, is a white supremacist and an amerikkkan apologist, along with being a bad liar. Though some in the Press Corp. challenged his nazi comments, they readily dismissed them as 'ignorance', due to his failure to read history. None of the press commented on nor challenged his comments about the U.S.'s restraint in not using chemical weapons since WWI. The truth is, Spicer, is very well aware of the nazis chemical weapons use and experimentation on defenseless citizens of Europe and Eurasia. Similarly, he is well aware (as are those in the press) of the U.S. use of "Agent Orange" during the Vietnam War (1964 - 1972).

Actually, the U.S. regime has never ceased using chemical weapons to kill. The regime has remained consistent in its use of chemical weapons in the form of 'Lethal Chemical Injections' to kill U.S. citizens who have been condemned to death, as an expression of moral necessity, just punishment, and emotional outrage.

In 1924, the State of Nevada, conducted the first "gas murder" experiment, but it was horribly ineffective. However, gassing the condemned continued. At some point, the State of Oklahoma commissioned Chief Medical Examiner Jay Chapman to devise a method to kill the condemned, eventually, he devised the current method of 'lethal chemical' murder, consisting of a concoction of three "chemicals": Sodium Thiopental, Pancuronium Bromide, and Potassium Chloride. In 1982, Texas was the first State to use this method of chemical murder on a U.S. citizen.

Today, with drug manufactures and distributors refusing to supply the above mentioned 'Drugs,' originally designed to save/preserve life, not murder people, the States have taken to finding new creative ways to murder. Some of these methods have produced identical results and effects (convulsions, gagging, foaming at the mouth, and suffocation) the Syrian people suffered. Suffering that caused the media to advise, "Caution: These images are graphic!" Images that supposedly caused Spicer and Trump to denounce as "abominable, horrifying, vile, and a disgrace to humanity." The only difference between those images and what takes place in the U.S. death chambers, the condemn are bound and strapped to a cruciform.

In the case of the U.S. regime's unruly citizens, such sordid, cruel, sadistic, and antiquated acts of chemical murder is not viewed as a disgrace to humanity, but simply as a punitive deterrence and sterile form of justice.

From my stance on Maa, a voice from Deathrow!
