

Hello everyone, I just want to share a testimony of what's doing in my life and how he is using me to touch the life of a non-believer. I met a dude that is pretty smart and we became friends on the first day of me being moved to this new housing area. Now for some reason I had forgotten to put on my KAIRDS cross on the day I moved but the next day I wore it like I normally do. My new buddy spotted my ~~new~~ cross and said "You are too smart to believe in some god at all let alone the impossible one the Christians talk about." Well we started discussing our very different beliefs but we still remained friends. For the next couple of weeks he would every now and then become frustrated with not being able to convert me to his beliefs and he'd start a very heated argument with me on a different subject. A couple of times he became so offensive I almost let it become physical. I considered cutting him out of my life but I decided to get advice from some brothers first. One told me that the guy was like a disease and I stop talking to him because he was interfering with my service to God. A couple of other brothers told me that God put him in my life for a reason and that I should be patient and let the Holy Spirit lead me. The latter advice rang true to my spirit so I slowed down and prayed for God to reveal the truth of his never ending love to my atheist friend. I shared my testimony of God healing me of my mental illness but he dismissively tried to ~~ex~~ explain it away. God helped me keep him from starting arguments with me but God is touching him in a way I would never have considered. I am indigent-broke-and I haven't been able to go to the commissary-store-since 2007. I quit hustling-selling pills, porn pics and gambling-to honor God by showing that I trust The Father to provide everything for me after his miracle in 2015. Now my friend was watching and he started joking around with me about how I should become a cult leader because he saw how I treat everyone with respect-compassion and love. As God wants, and how most

RESPOND to that positively. He also sees how God uses other people to bless me with hygiene products, food and coffee which I cannot buy for myself. He watched as I gladly helped everyone who needed coffee in our living area when a lot of people on the unit were out because the commissary was out. He watched me as I freely gave coffee to people who made store regularly and to guys weren't Christian. He asked me why I helped these people even the ones who go to store and never help me out? I told him that God blesses me so that I can share his love with ~~anyone~~ everyone by blessing them when they need it. I told him that it is God's coffee and he lends it to me so that I can share his love for everyone by giving them what they need. He said if I run out, that he didn't want to hear me cry. One day I was blessed with 5 bags of coffee and he saw it, by the time he came to my door I dividing up 2 of the bags. He said that I had gotten a bunch of coffee and asked me what I was doing? I told him that I knew of several dudes who needed coffee, so I was sending them some. He told me I was crazy, I told him, "No brother, this is God's coffee and I'm just his servant, if I were to hold onto this coffee I would be stealing from God and telling him I didn't really trust God to provide me with more." The next day I came back from church feeling bad about a disagreement I had with a couple of brothers and my friend asked me what was wrong. After I explained, my atheist friend said, "You are the first person I've seen who ~~lives~~ lives the way ~~God~~ the way your God says to live, so don't let those jerks get you down." My friends be the light of the world by showing them God's ~~the~~ Love in the way you live. Give to those in need, even if it's your last, knowing God will provide you with what you need. Then he can use you to touch the life of his lost children. Show the world the truth by giving even your last because you know that
