

BRCI PRISONER ART SHOW

On February 27th we'll be having an art exhibit here at the Character Based Unit, CBU, at Broad River Correctional Institution. Visitors will be coming from all over SCDC and the state.

And, of course, I'm curator over the whole thing!

Students in my Art 101 and Art / Hobby Craft Program, have already finished about a dozen works, and have a couple of other dozen in the works to be completed by the 27th. The problem is, right now, the CBU is on a lock-down due some crack- and meth-head gangbanger activities. Unfortunately this program is not entirely devoid of its share of ghetto-drones. We just don't have as many as the other buildings. The drones here have a leader that manages to keep his hands clean. He's on the other side of the building--EVERYONE knows what he really is--but, he shines in their eye as a necessary evil I suppose. The best thing for the program will be his departure--which is said to be soon, as he's awaiting a drop in custody level, and a prison transfer.

I hope that we come off of the lock-down soon; because this throws a big hairy monkey wrench into the art show (no pun intended). And, I'm sure that once we come off, everything will be expected to run as smoothly as if we'd never been locked down!

But that's okay.

I can throw the whole thing together in no time.
The show will go on.
