The Bomb Song

Now I want everybody here who feels the spirit of the song
And that means all you people out there in record land
To sing along with your old friends Country Joe & The Fish.
We will say an old time prayer as we look up to the sky and we ask the Lord:
Please, don't you drop that h-bomb on me, go and drop it on yourself, alright ...

Well, I said please,
Please don't drop,
Don't drop that h-bomb,
H-bomb on me

Yeah, I said please,
Please don't drop,
Don't drop that h-bomb on me.

Yeah, I said please,
Please don't drop,
Don't drop that h-bomb on me, yes,

Well, you can drop it,
Oh, you can drop it on yourself.

Thought Dream

I walk through the scented air of summer's blooming

Leon,
I thought you may like this Song. like it says don't drop that h-bomb on me, well drop it, oh, you can drop it on yourself. They should do it to them selves, right?
They always try to drop the bomb on us!

Colin Kaepernick

Courage is contagious.

DAVE ZIRIN

People say that this moment of athletic activism started with Colin Kaepernick taking that knee during the national anthem. But as Kaepernick would be the first to acknowledge, it didn't begin with a knee; it started with the Black Lives Matter movement and the pressing need to stand up to racism and police violence.

Just as, today, you can't talk about the civil-rights movement of the 1950s without talking about Jackie Robinson, or of the 1960s without talking about Muhammad Ali, or of the women's liberation movement without talking about Billie Jean King, in future years you won't be able to talk about this new millennial resistance to racism without talking about Colin Kaepernick.

We should also remember that it's not just what Kaepernick did; it's what he said. When asked why he didn't stand for the anthem, Kaepernick replied, "I am not going to stand up to show pride in a flag for a country that oppresses black people and people of color. To me, this is bigger than football, and it would be selfish on my part to look the other way. There are bodies in the street and people getting paid leave and getting away with murder."

As the fiery Hotspur puts it in Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part I: "tell truth, and shame the devil!" Kaepernick told the truth, but the devil doesn't like to be shamed, and the backlash against him has been ferocious. He's been showered with abuse by some of the most dangerous sewer-dwellers in America. And, of course, the NFL's owners—who showered our white-supremacist president with millions of dollars—have collectively denied Kaepernick a living. Their intent, it is obvious now, was to turn him into a ghost story, a warning to other players: Don't be like Colin or you'll pay the ultimate price.

But instead of becoming a ghost story, Kaepernick has become an icon of resistance, and we have all seen this sports season how athletes have used their hyper-exalted, brought-to-you-by-Nike platform to say something about the world.

Still, while much of the coverage has been about professional athletes speaking out, the true resonance has been felt among our youth. High-school athletes across the US, in different sports, have taken a knee to protest the gap between the promises of this country and the lived reality of racism. This has turned the athletic field, which for so long has been either apolitical or a place of uncritical patriotism, into a site of visible dissent.

Now we live in a world where sports, of all things, have given us an arena of tenacious resistance—and, most importantly, hope in very difficult times. What Colin Kaepernick has done is retaught an old lesson to a new generation: that courage is contagious.

IMMIGRATION

Motel 6's ICE Machine

Employees at Motel 6 locations in Washington State handed Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers the personal details of thousands of customers in order to help the federal agency arrest undocumented immigrants, according to a lawsuit filed in January by the state attorney general. Some Motel 6 locations would provide their guest lists to ICE on a "near-daily basis"; ICE officials would circle "Latino-sounding names" that the agency would then target, according to a report in The Washington Post. In one location, the motel allegedly supplied names to ICE on 228 occasions over a 225-day period.

The lawsuit follows an investigation by Phoenix New Times last September, which revealed that two Motel 6 locations in Arizona had been alerting ICE to report guests they thought might be undocumented. That article prompted a check for similar occurrences in Washington. According to the attorney general's office, the incidents in Arizona were not isolated: At least six corporate-owned locations in the Evergreen State assisted ICE by furnishing the agency with private personal information. In a statement, Washington Attorney General Bob Ferguson said that four of those locations released information on more than 9,000 customers. "Motel 6 implied this was a local problem. We have found that is not true," Ferguson said, referring to a statement released by the company claiming that any cooperation with ICE was "implemented at the local level without the knowledge of senior management." —Miguel Salazar

President Trump is expected to unveil his infrastructure bill later this month. Here are just a few of the challenges it will have to address:

200

Estimated number of years it would take to fully replace the nation's drinking-water pipes at the current rate

D+

Grade given to the country's energy infrastructure by the American Society of Civil Engineers; the grid would cost nearly $5 trillion to replace

188M

Trips taken every day across structurally deficient bridges in the US; repairing them would cost more than $120 billion

$200B

Total federal infrastructure spending over the next 10 years that Trump is expected to announce; Democrats have proposed $1 trillion in new investment

Going From Bad to Worse

Shortly after Hurricane Maria battered Puerto Rico in September, President Trump told reporters that the federal emergency response on the island was "incredible.... People can't believe how successful that has been."

This, of course, was not true. A new report by the humanitarian group Refugees International lambastes federal and Puerto Rican authorities for their "largely uncoordinated and poorly implemented" disaster-relief efforts, which have only been "prolonging the humanitarian emergency on the ground."

And the grim news shows no signs of slowing. After recent investigations suggested that many more people—over 1,000—had died as a result of the hurricane than the government tally of 64, Governor Ricardo Rosselló announced a review of the official death count.

To make matters worse, the new Republican tax bill will treat companies with operations on the island as if they're working in a foreign country. This imposes a 12.5 percent tax on intellectual-property income, which could spur more businesses to flee the island. "We're pretty much just getting ready for 'Maria part 2,'" economist Heide Calero told CNBC.

Restoring Voting Rights

In Florida, 1 million people could benefit.

Signature-gatherers across Florida are on a last push to qualify the Voting Rights Restoration Initiative for the November 2018 ballot, a measure that, if it passes, would restore voting rights to well over 1 million Floridians. Organizers with the grassroots group Floridians for a Fair Democracy, which is pushing the proposal, are confident they will get the minimum number of signatures. If they do, the initiative could turn out to be the most important one in the country next November. The implications for how we define our democracy, and whom we include within it, are huge.

Florida is one of a handful of states, mostly in the Deep South, that make it all but impossible for felons to regain their right to vote after they complete their sentence. Currently, an individual has to petition the governor for restoration, and few such petitions are granted. The process is designed to be as byzantine and insurmountable as possible. So, for the vast majority of felons, disenfranchisement is a lifelong condition.

Florida has permanently disenfranchised felons ever since the state's post-Civil War constitution was rewritten to prevent blacks and poor people from voting. In an age of mass incarceration, this law has created a silent epidemic of disenfranchisement. In the years immediately after the 2000 presidential election, the ACLU, the Sentencing Project, and other groups studying the crisis estimated that there were about 750,000 disenfranchised Floridians, the majority of whom had completed their sentence. Now some 1.5 million Floridians—about 10 percent of the adult citizen population, including 21 percent of African-American men—are voteless, some because they are still serving sentences, but most because of past felony convictions.

If the initiative passes, it will automatically restore voting rights to most felons after their sentences are complete (murderers and sexual offenders are excluded). "This is about creating a more inclusive democracy," argues 50-year-old Desmond Meade, an Orlando resident who founded the Florida Rights Restoration Coalition a few years back. Meade knows the effects of disenfranchisement firsthand: Addicted to drugs, he cycled in and out of jail and prison in the 1990s and early 2000s. In the mid-2000s, after weaning himself off drugs, Meade went to college and eventually got a law degree. Until his rights are restored, however, he can neither vote nor take the Florida bar exam in order to begin working as an attorney.

"It's less about how a person votes, whether they vote Democrat or Republican," he explains. "It's about redemption, second chances. Once a person has served their time, they should be able to move on with their lives."

If the initiative qualifies for the ballot, it will need 60 percent support in the November election in order for it to be written into the state's constitution.

In a sane society—one, that is, with minimal respect for democratic procedure—such a reform would win near-universal support. Keeping vast numbers of people in a permanent state of sub-citizenship flies in the face of basic principles of rehabilitation and justice. Unfortunately, Florida has long resisted such reforms, and Republican Governor Rick Scott made a point of reversing his predecessor's efforts to speed up the cumbersome application process. Similar battles around re-enfranchisement have occurred in Iowa, Virginia, and a few other states in recent years, where Democratic governors have pushed for reforms, and their Republican successors and/or Republican legislators have then attempted, with varying degrees of success, to undo the changes. But this is the first attempt to overturn disenfranchisement statutes through an initiative.

Meade says that people have been coming to help with the campaign in Florida "from Pensacola all the way to Key West, and all points in between. The most exciting thing around this is the grassroots movement."

Hopefully, come November 2018, Florida will end the disgrace of mass disenfranchisement. It is long past time.

"The tension of the game made him do that," Gonzalez said. "If they had hit two homers they would have done the same thing. It's nothing personal. Everybody's enjoying the moment."

However, the Dodgers wouldn't go quietly. Yasiel Puig hit a leadoff homer of his own in the bottom of the 10th and the Dodgers tied the game on a two-out RBI single by Kike Hernandez off closer Ken Giles. Hernandez hit just .159 against right-handed pitchers during the regular season. But then in the 11th -- with veteran Brandon McCarthy pitching for the first time since Oct. 1 and making his first career appearance in the postseason -- Springer connected on an 89 mph slider that just kept carrying and carrying until it disappeared over the right field wall.

Leonardo da Vinci's 'Male Mona Lisa' can be yours for just $100M (or more)
SAN FRANCISCO — Pictures don't do it justice.

In person, Leonardo da Vinci's Salvator Mundi is haunting, a 500-year-old portrait of Jesus Christ that seems to radiate from within while displaying a staggering mastery of anatomy, optics and craft.

And for somewhere (way) north of $100 million, it can be yours.

"This is the holy grail of Old Master paintings, some people call it the male Mona Lisa," says Francois de Poortere, head of the Old Masters department at Christie's, which will auction off the painting in New York on Nov. 15. "People are deeply taken by this work. You could buy it and just build an entire museum around it."

Salvator Mundi, which means "Savior of the World," is stopping in a few cities around the world for a brief series of public displays that include Hong Kong, London and New York. It is said to be the only one of da Vinci's 20 known paintings (don't forget, this definitive Renaissance man was also an engineer, astronomer and set designer) in private hands. And while the Louvre Museum's Mona Lisa might be more famous,

Mundi displays a unique radiance over that yellowing gem because it has been cleaned.

$1.3M auction bid buys Albert Einstein's theory of happiness

JERUSALEM (AP) — While Albert Einstein's theory of happiness may be relative, it fetched $1.3 million at a Jerusalem auction on Tuesday.

The Nobel-winning scientist's musings, handwritten on a note, may not be as famous as his groundbreaking theory of relativity, but they still shed light on one of the great modern minds.

Winner's Auctions and Exhibitions said Einstein was traveling in Japan in 1922 when he was told he would be awarded the Nobel Prize in physics. In Tokyo, Einstein scribbled the note in German to a bellboy after he did not have cash to give him a tip.

"A calm and modest life brings more happiness than the pursuit of success combined with constant restlessness," it reads.

Gal Wiener, CEO of the auction house, said Einstein told the bellboy that because of his fame, the handwritten note "will probably be worth more than a regular tip."

Wiener said bidding began at $2,000 and quickly escalated, with the bidding war lasting around 25 minutes.

Another note Einstein gave the bellboy, which read "Where there's a will there's a way," was sold for over $200,000, Wiener said.

He would not identify the buyer or seller of either note.

Einstein was a founder of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and left it his literary estate and personal papers. He declined an invitation to serve as Israel's first president. Einstein died in 1955.

Red light, green light: New cop car can trip traffic signals

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Police Department is getting a new fleet of patrol vehicles that include a feature any motorist stuck at a traffic light would envy. The department announced Monday it will receive 150 new patrol vehicles that come equipped with technology that allows an officer to trip a traffic signal and change it to green when the car's emergency lights are on. The police cars will also come with ballistic shields on the doors and windows.

The department will receive 100 of the vehicles by mid-December and get the remaining 50 by March. They will include sedans, SUVs and patrol wagons.

The first shipment is heading to a police district in west Philadelphia.

HENRIETTA, N.Y. (AP) — A runaway garbage truck has slammed into the front of a New York gift shop named A Beautiful Mess, causing extensive damage.

Owner Jeri Flack says he received a call from police on Monday informing her that a garbage truck rolled away from a gas station in Henrietta, traveled across the street and crashed into Flack's retail store.

WHAM-TV reports that gas station workers say the truck driver parked there to use the bathroom and the truck had rolled away by the time he returned.

No one was injured, but the truck's impact caused serious structural damage to the 200-year-old brick building.

Flack says she doesn't know if she'll be able to reopen in time for the Christmas shopping season.

The most expensive house in the world can be yours for a cool $410 million

Fed up with your tiny apartment? Looking to impress your friends? Got about $410 million to spare? Then the most expensive home ever to go on sale could be yours.

Yes, the Villa Les Cèdres, an 18,000-square-foot, 14-bedroom mega-mansion in the south of France is now on the market. It even has royal connections, having been owned in the early 20th century by King Leopold II of Belgium, who apparently thought his palaces at home weren't quite enough.

Part of the reason for its high price is its location in super-exclusive Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat, a resort town perched on a picturesque peninsula between Nice and Monaco. Also adding to the cachet is the fact that it is situated on 35 manicured acres in a community where pricey homes tend to be crowded onto small lots.

The Villa Les Cèdres library contains about 3,000 books on flora and naturalism, including a 17th-century botanical tome said to be worth several hundred thousand dollars, according to Bloomberg Businessweek, which toured the decadent domicile. Unfortunately, you will have to pay extra for that, as well as for the carpets, paintings and furniture contained in the home.

But you won't pay extra for notable neighbors, who include famed composer Andrew Lloyd Webber and Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen.

The house is currently owned by Italian beverage giant Campari, which inherited the property when it bought Produits Marnier Lapostolle, the maker of Grand Marnier, an orange-flavored liqueur sometimes used in making margaritas. The Marnier-Lapostolle family bought the home in 1924, Bloomberg reported.

Will it fetch its asking price? With Russian oligarchs, who have until recently been on a buying spree in the area, currently in short supply, Bloomberg says the assessed value may be aspirational.

However, if the price does not drop dramatically, it will become the most expensive residential sale in history, according to CNN, trumping the Clampett estate in Bel Air, Calif., which listed in August for $350 million.

Canadian man fined for singing '90s dance tune in car

MONTREAL (AP) — A Canadian man's decision to belt out a 1990s dance hit while inside his car has landed him a $149 ticket for being too loud in public.

But Taoufik Moalla said Monday he'll fight the ticket and denies his singing was as deafening as authorities claim.

Moalla says he was happily singing along with the windows mostly rolled up to C+C Music Factory's "Gonna Make You Sweat (Everybody Dance Now)," which neared the top of the Billboard chart in 1991, when he was stopped.

He says he initially thought Montreal police wanted him to move out of their way.

He says he was asked if he was yelling and he said no. One of the officers walked away and returned with the fine for screaming in a public place.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Seth Jones had a goal and an assist for Columbus to help the Blue Jackets beat the Sabres.

Serge Bobrovsky stopped 34 of 35 shots to lead Columbus (6-3-0) to its fifth win in its last seven games.

NHL roundup

Jonathan Quick stopped 40 shots for his 46th career shutout, Adrian Kempe and Tyler Toffoli scored 11 seconds apart in the first period and the Los Angeles Kings beat the Montreal Canadiens 4-0 on Thursday night. The Canadiens (2-7-1) thought their goal-scoring woes were behind them when they beat Florida 5-1 on Tuesday night, but the bad luck and worse shooting were back in force as they outshot Los Angeles 40-27. It was Quick's second shutout this season and came in his 500th career game..

Penguins 2, Jets 1, OT

Phil Kessel's 300th career goal at 1:07 of overtime lifted Pittsburgh past Winnipeg. Kessel, who also scored the overtime winner against Edmonton on Tuesday, became the 18th American-born player to reach 300 career goals and the second active behind Minnesota's Zach Parise.

Kessel stripped Patrik Laine of the puck at his own blue line and went the other way on a breakaway. Kessel, with nine points in his last seven games, snapped a wrist shot between the pads of Jets goalie Connor Hellebuyck for the winner.

Matt Murray stopped 30 shots to win his seventh straight since allowing 11 goals on 65 shots in his first two appearances.

Rangers 5, Coyotes 2

Pavel Buchnevich scored twice and added an assist, rookie Boo Nieves had three assists to lead the New York Rangers beat winless Arizona for just their third victory of the season.

The Rangers shook up their line combinations and played with a traditional lineup consisting of 12 forwards and six defensemen for the first time in a week. It helped them beat Arizona for the eighth straight time, dating back to March 24, 2014.

Lightning 3, Red Wings 2

Steven Stamkos and Nikita Kucherov became the seventh set of teammates in NHL history to start the season with point streaks of at least 11 games, leading surging Tampa Bay past Detroit.

Kucherov got his 12th goal in the first period, and setup Stamkos' power-play goal from the low left circle that put Tampa Bay (9-1-1) up 2-1 at 6:22 of the third.

Frans Nielsen had two goals and Jimmy Howard stopped 35 shots for the Red Wings (4-6-1), who have lost six straight (0-5-1). Detroit has lost nine straight games against Tampa Bay.

Bruins 2, Sharks 1

Danton Heinen scored both goals and Anton Khudobin made 36 saves to lift Boston past San Jose.

Joe Thornton scored for the Sharks, who went 1 for 6 on the power play. They had a chance in the final two minutes after Brandon Carlo went off for slashing and got three shots while creating havoc in front of Khudobin but couldn't capitalize.

Panthers 7, Ducks 3

Radim Vrbata recorded his seventh career hat trick to lift Florida past Anaheim.

Evegenii Dadanov scored two goals and Vincent Trocheck and Aleksander Barkov each had a goal and two assists for the Panthers while Owen Tippett, the youngest player in the NHL at 18, scored his first career goal. James Reimer made 31 saves. Thirteen players recorded points for the Panthers.

Hurricanes 6, Maple Leafs 3

Josh Jooris scored twice, Teuvo Teravainen had a three-point night and Carolina beat Toronto.

Victor Rask scored midway through the second period to give Carolina the lead and Brock McGinn and Jooris added insurance goals in the third. Elias Lindholm and Teravainen also scored for the Hurricanes, who ended a two-game losing skid.

Senators 5, Flyers 4

Jean-Gabriel Pageau had a goal and two assists, Erik Karlsson added two assists and Ottawa held off Philadelphia.

The Flyers appeared to score midway through the third period but after a coach's challenge the goal was reversed due to goaltender interference.

Jakub Voracek and Travis Konecny had the other goals for Philadelphia, while Michal Neuvirth stopped 22 shots.

Wild 6, Islanders 4

Eric Staal had a goal and assist, and Luke Kunin and Zack Mitchell each scored their first NHL goals to lead Minnesota.

Staal scored short-handed to cap a three-goal first-period burst for Minnesota in 7:26. He later assisted on Kunin's tally as the rookie became the first player in Wild history to score short-handed for his first NHL goal, according to the Elias Sports Bureau.

Oilers 5, Stars 4

Matt Benning scored the tiebreaking goal with 2:27 remaining and Ryan Nugent-Hopkins had two goals as Edmonton finally found its offensive touch in a win over Dallas.

Connor McDavid and Patrick Maroon also scored for the Oilers, who had scored an NHL-low 15 goals through the first eight games. Cam Talbot stopped 28 shots. Jamie Benn struck twice for the Stars, and Alexander Radulov and Esa Lindell also scored for Dallas in its second straight loss. Ben Bishop finished with 30 saves.

Red hot World Series: Justin Turner, Clayton Kershaw lead Dodgers to Game 1 win over Astros

LOS ANGELES — Breaking down Game 1 of the World Series between the Houston Astros and Los Angeles Dodgers at Dodger Stadium:

Dodgers 3, Astros 1: Dodgers lead series, 1-0.

The game: This is exactly what makes the Fall Classic classic.

Justin Turner broke up a pitching duel between a pair of Cy Young Award winning lefties with a two-run homer in the bottom of the sixth to lift the Dodgers to victory in the opener of the 113th World Series.

"I didn't know if it was going to be a home run or not. I knew I back spun it pretty good. I knew I hit it really high," Turner said.

With the temperature at first pitch a World Series record 103 degrees, home runs figured to be an important weapon for both offenses. "When it's that hot here, the ball does travel a lot better," he said. "If it's 10 degrees cooler, that's probably a routine fly ball in left field." All four runs in the game came as a result of homers off starters Clayton Kershaw and Dallas Keuchel.

After Kershaw departed, the Dodgers bullpen was masterful once again, with Brandon Morrow and Kenley Jansen holding the Astros scoreless over the final two innings. In this postseason, Dodger relievers have pitched 30 2/3 innings and have given up three earned runs (0.88 ERA).

And the Dodgers wrapped it up in 2 hours, 28 minutes -- fastest game since Game 4 of the 1992 Fall Classic.

Astros persevere, win wild one in 11th inning to stun Dodgers and even World Series

LOS ANGELES — Breaking down Game 2 of the World Series between the Houston Astros and Los Angeles Dodgers at Dodger Stadium:

Astros 7, Dodgers 6 (11 inn.): Series tied, 1-1.

The game: Now, this World Series has some drama.

What looked like a sure-fire two games-to-none lead for the Dodgers is all even thanks to some late-inning heroics from the top of the Astros order.

In one of the craziest games in World Series history, George Springer's two-run blast in the top of the 11th was the final blow in a slugfest that included eight home runs and blown saves by both teams' closers.

"I've been part of some pretty exciting games, but with all that this one entailed to be in the World Series and to be down a game, the roller coaster of emotion ..." marveled Astros starter Justin Verlander, who allowed three runs in six innings, but was long gone by the time the game was decided, "This is an instant classic, and to be able to be part of it is pretty special."

Houston trailed 3-1 entering the eighth inning with a dominant Dodger bullpen that had pitched 28 consecutive scoreless innings in the postseason poised to close things out. However, Carlos Correa's RBI single and Marwin Gonzalez's solo homer off Kenley Jansen pulled Houston even.

With Josh Fields taking over for Jansen in the 10th, Jose Altuve and Correa hit back-to-back home runs in the top of the 10th inning to put the Astros in front. Correa even punctuated his blast with an elite-level bat flip.

A bold badger briefly replaced a family's pet cat after the wild animal reportedly snuck into a home through a cat door last week, ate the feline's food and took a nap in the cat bed.

An animal rescue officer with the Scottish SPCA was called to the Linlithgow home on Wednesday after the homeowner discovered the wild animal nestled up in the plush bed, the animal welfare group reported on its website.

SPCA Officer Connie O'Neil, who came face-to-face with the cozy creature, said getting the animal to leave took some effort. "He had gotten in through the cat flap and had eaten all the cat food before going for a sleep on the cat bed," she recalled in a post on the SSPCA's website. "He didn't seem too happy when I tried to move him but I was able to slide the cat bed round and it was then that the badger noticed the back door was open so [he] made a run for it!"

Though the badger may have played the cat's role to a T, the SPCA advised people to proceed with caution if they spot such animals.

"Like all wild animals badgers can be aggressive when injured or cornered so we would advise not to go near or touch them without giving us a call first," said Scottish SPCA chief superintendent, Mike Flynn. Fortunately, he said badgers breaking into homes is "highly unusual."

Horoscopes by Holiday

Venus and Pluto are not getting along today, and it's bad news for relationships on autopilot. The autopilot will now deflate, as occurred in the 1980s parody disaster film "Airplane!" With no one flying the thing, expect to have strong feelings, to exchange heated words and to generally struggle over the power until it finds a place to comfortably settle in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Ailments of the soul require the healing balm of faith. As it is with all balms, the healing isn't really in the ointment. The balm creates a condition in which the body can put itself back together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Good news is fun to deliver. You'll be tempted to leave the bad news for someone else to tell, or maybe if you ignore it, it will somehow go away.

Hey, it's actually worked before.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Being good can be hard. Draining. It is possible that you actually feel weary from constantly doing the right thing. Maybe there's such a thing as being too good. Anyway, you don't need to do wrong. Rest and do nothing instead.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Your encouragement will boost the morale of your group. Your role as cheerleader is crucial, because all those little extra things you do — the efforts you make that you don't have to make — create cohesion. You're the glue.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). There's a powerful, driving beat behind your love — a rhythm that moves everything forward. Just be careful not to overpower anyone with your energy, because that would be counterproductive to your desire.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Expectations are so tricky. Often people really will rise to the guidelines that expectations impose. But right now, you'll be pleasantly surprised by what occurs when you loosen up in your expectations of a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The technology will fail, glitch and even seem to mock you today, but this is all a test of your patience, and ultimately very easily solved. These issues make you extra appreciative of the devices that serve you daily.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Your deft handling of a delicate matter will earn you the trust and respect of the kind of intelligent, sensitive people who recognize the value of social skills such as yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You've come to the bridge. As you make your way across, appreciate all that went into building this shortcut that joins all the places you want to go. This appreciation may keep you from burning the bridge later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The impossibilities may be, upon second thought, quite possible after all. In fact, there's a whole range of things that might occur were any one of the elements involved to be changed or subtracted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Sit quietly, processing your thoughts until you feel that you can accept what's going on in your life. You might not get to that point, but you will make progress. Anyway, there is no greater success than coming to terms with now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). People who are just trying to help often don't know how best to do it. Friends might overstep boundaries.

Your tact will go a long way. If there's a choice between taking issue with something and letting it go, do the latter.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 27). You've the savvy to turn a small amount into a hefty sum. This isn't about gambling; it's about intelligent investing. Neatness and organization solve a problem. Those you live with and near will get the benefit of your considerable skill in creating beautiful environments. Adventure calls in November and May. Sagittarius and Capricorn adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 20, 4, 11, 13 and 9.

Dear Leon Irby #033802,

I am writing to you because our records show that it's time to renew your Wisconsin Public Television membership.

Please, take a moment to renew your membership today. Your favorite programs on Wisconsin Public Television rely on your support. And every contribution you make is a smart investment. As our membership grows and revenue increases, more great programs come back to you.

We count on friends like you to support your favorite programs with an annual gift. When we lose support from loyal members, our revenue doesn't balance with the substantial cost of bringing you the programs you enjoy and expect from Wisconsin Public Television.

But too many viewers don't see the connection between contributing and having their favorite programs on the air every day. I think you understand the connection and agree that Wisconsin Public Television is valuable to life in Wisconsin. If you do, please renew your membership today.

With your help, we'll continue to bring you programs that offer new perspectives such as PBS Newshour and Frontline, fascinating adventures on Nature and NOVA, and unexpected treasures on Antiques Roadshow. And children in our area can turn to Wisconsin Public Television for free, non-commercial educational programs like Sesame Street, Curious George and Daniel Tiger's Neighborhood.

Your support as a member also helps Wisconsin Public Television produce informative local programs such as Here and Now and Wisconsin Foodie plus original documentaries such as Tribal Histories and Wisconsin Hometown Stories.

As I hope you can see, there is no question of your role in the success of Wisconsin Public Television.

(please, read on)

You are an integral part of our ability to provide programs that enrich our lives, challenge our minds and open up new worlds of discovery. Your annual membership contributions go above and beyond the ordinary to help secure a bright future for the public service provided each day all across Wisconsin.

This is why I'm asking you to take a moment now to renew your annual support and provide our state with the best programs on television.

Without friends like you, Wisconsin Public Television's valuable programming would not exist. As you may know, more than 50% of our yearly budget comes from contributions from the community.

Will you send a contribution of $20, $35 or $50 today and help us continue to offer all the exciting adventures, ideas, arts and culture that enriches Wisconsin?

For your support of Wisconsin Public Television's programs, you'll enjoy valuable benefits:

- WPT's program guide, Airwaves, delivered to your mailbox every month
- Personal entry packet for the annual "Lucky-Go-Happy" Sweepstakes
- An opportunity to shape the programs in the year ahead with our annual Member Survey
- Optional e-mail updates including WPT news, program previews, special events and offers and much, much more

We're depending upon you — as one of our valued members — to renew your support because we must raise the money it takes for the programs you enjoy.

Thank you for continuing your support ... we can't do it without you.

Sincerely,
