Hello! Thank you for posting this on my behalf. i always appreciate this and being able to voice however I am feeling on any given day as well as being able to post the works I have written to people. It helps me feel more grounded in a way few things on the inside can. Lately, I haven't been able to distinguish between my left and right hand or trying to find myself is seemingly harder than it would seem to be on a regular basis. I know that I should be able to overcome adversity condiering I have been on the inside now, for almost 11 years, but every day presents its own form of situations some I find i have never encountered before and yet, I try to look at things and still remian as human as possible and find the silver lining in every situation.
