Thanks for dropping in ~~BetweenTheHedges~~ and sharing the Glory of Hera with me.

I'm sure you know Joseph Campbell - American mythologist & folklorist - Spells out the significances of mythology too. Its all archetypal indicators of our nature - locked in the so-called unconscious.

The beauty of mythology is that those ennobling impressions re-form consciousness. Human beings tend to emulate those things which they revere. Its where the slogan What Would Jesus Do, comes from - don't you know? When in Rome ... !

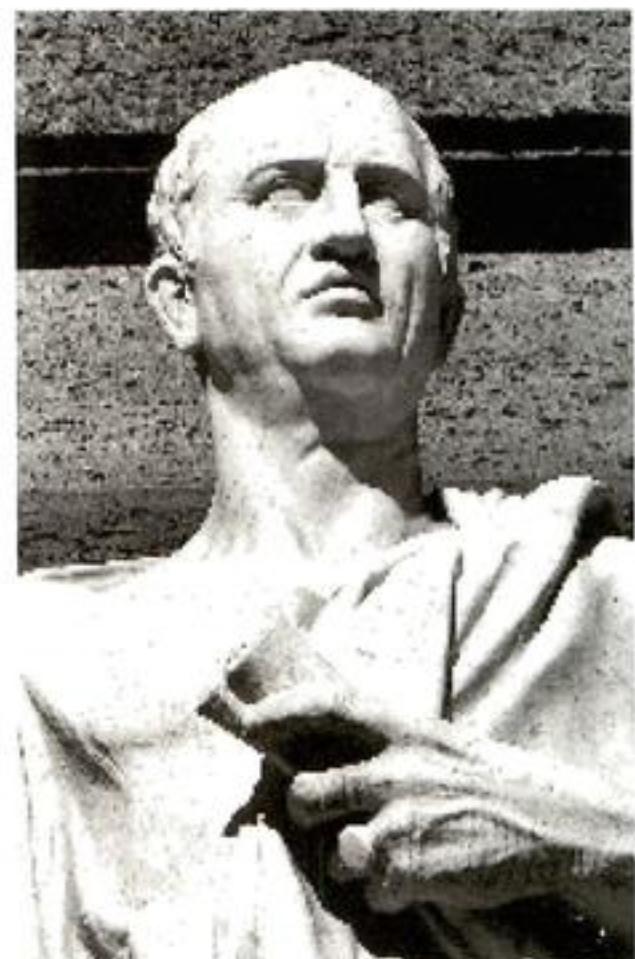

In a make-believe world, BEWARE! Matt. 24:24 points out the Pied Pipers, who true to the stratagems of demagoguery convince believers how treacherous common-sense can be. Stupid slaves dont think - they obey! they say. Good thing we stalwartly resist slavery, isn't it.

"Coming to grips with the unconscious, and bringing unconsciousness to the light of Consciousness" - glorious indeed! Look up the word Persona, and follow C.G. Jung's clews into the Anima/Animus game.

"The power of Eloquence", you say - and "Coax"? I had to look up those words to see why you attribute them to me. Eloquent (to speak out) 1: marked by forceful and fluent expression 2: vividly or movingly expressive or revealing. and Coax 4: to manipulate with great perseverance and usually with considerable effort toward a desired state or activity. Yes indeed, so I AM.

Will I AM
