

Love Letter To My Son

7/5/18

My Dearest Son:

I miss you, everyone misses you. I know I haven't written you in a while. It's not because I don't love you, I love you with all that is me. I think of you everyday and I still wonder in my mind if things would have been different for you if I would have been there in your life. No I'm pass the phase of blaming myself now I just miss you and dwell on the times we had together and believe me son they were all good times. You were a beautiful little baby, a little boy with so much joy in your eyes, a handsome young man always so eager to share yourself even when your heart was in so much pain. I miss that little boy of mine who loved to laugh whom everybody loved. I know you're watching me son and don't worry Jimmy's not replacing you - he just reminds me so much of you - always eager to share his self trying to make everyone laugh all the time - his life mirror yours, his mother was never there, but he still loves her for the times she was. He hates his father right now I hope he gets over that soon, and he has nothing to look forward to. A lot like you - a lot like me. You once ask me how I keep going? I don't know (hope maybe) I just keep hoping) dreaming. It's a beautiful day today - sunshine in the 90's, a light wind - I can almost hear the birds singing. I will keep you here in my heart all day as I do everyday. I will always love you and I will always miss you, we all do. Tell grandma hi for me.

Loving You Always
Daddy

P.S. I promise to write you every year for your birthday & Dash
