

Weather break (7-18-2018, Wed, 1603L)

This week the temps have dropped into mid 80's and mid 60's at night. What a relief! When the daytime temps exceed 90 deg. °F the heat index often reaches 103-105. Then if the night remains in the 70's, you just roll around all night sweating and miserable. The vent fans don't work so within the cell it can feel like being stuck in your backyard shed.

As simple as it seems - the fact of cooler temps in July is a great relief. It should be at least a week that we get a break. Small blessings. :-)
