

SELF-ADORATION

It is an ugly thing: Lying, manipulating, and taking what one needs from another by pretending to be what they want.
And, when that need has come to its inevitable ending--the manipulation turns to another. "Love" without adoration, adoration without truth--as Charlie Brown gags away NOT on peanut butter, but a mouth full of his own shit--all of the lies that he has told, come reality.

It is an ugly thing: Using, another as a crutch, tossing them aside, yet turning to them when in need, with some self-imposed drama or emergency, in plea.
If #1 says "no"--then try #2-- If #2 says "F-U"--then look, #14 the non-priority is calling: "What's up" "NO! Really?" "Well, F-U!" It is a sad thing how one person's lying becomes the dying of others all for the sake of what? A lay? A fling?

It is an awesome truth: Time, how through it, Truth loves to sing.
