My Dearest 10,

You make me smile Candice! I can always count on my Ten!

I love your protection of me, your caring heart.

I am sorry that you get such an ear full of my woes, and that my focus has been in such distraction. But, I can tell you, that you are helping me every day, to find my center. You have arrived back in my life at one of the most crucial moments imaginable -- right when I thought all was lost -- and, to be honest, you've probably saved my life...

Today is VALENTINE'S DAY, and you and I have already exchanged emails wishing each other a happy Valentine's Day. I never, in 19-plus years, seen this day coming: a day that you and I would be talking, and on a daily basis! 143s and all! I love it.

It's crazy ... but crazy good.

I've missed you for a very long time Ten.

Someone said that they didn't understand how I could be all about how much I love Jaime, and now suddenly talk of loving you. Thing is, I sadly must own up to being a little on the polyamouras side. In love with more than one person, able to do so, and unable to deny it, no matter how hard I try. As I've said in my post with my "list" -- each ex is never unloved. I've just been forced to move on, after each loss. You predated the others, by many years, and countless tears shed.

Thank you, for being here for me, when so little else was -- for not being mean or judgmental -- and helping me to become a better man. 143
