

"Butterflies"

How deeply do I long for shy warm and tender kiss,

A kiss which sets this heart and soul ablaze with one over-whelming desire,

A kiss, that left with out - leaves my world
amiss,

This kiss of yours; So intoxicating - No drug could carry me any higher.

Ah! what joy doth it bring - when I'm blessed to bask in the warmth and beauty of thy smile.

A smile that embraces and shelters ~~me~~^{me} from this world's cold and dark madness,

So safe and serene I am - if but for awhile;

Your amazing smile my Beloved - there is no likeness.

The memory of your loving embrace doth sweetly linger upon my mind,

Leaving such an euphoric and vivid image of you and I intertwined.

A rapturous escape have I found,

staring into those mesmerizing eyes,

So enticing and loving in the sweetness of thine voice; that when alone in thy presence -

I'm filled with childish butterflies.
