

You thought about me, but not really, you was done with me

So many are talking the judicial reform. But do they really know what need to be fixed beside the lower level offender doing too much time for drug or people in the federal with cases that are ridiculous. What about the ~~offender~~ ^{inmates} in the State facilities. Some of their sentences for aggravated assaults, murder and robberies are ridiculous in Georgia. I am tired of us being overlooked as if the women are not suffering the same as men. Wrongfully accused Philadelphia was free after 2 decades. Frankville, PA - A Philadelphia man who spent more than two decades behind bars for a murder he didn't commit is a free man - 17 years after another man confessed to the crime. John Miller was released Wednesday after 22 years in prison. Surrounded by family outside the State Correctional Institution at Mahanoy 100 miles north of Philadelphia, he said it felt "Surreal." In 1998 a jury found Miller guilty of second-degree murder in the shooting death of a man in a parking lot outside 30th Street station two years prior, even though there was no physical evidence of his involvement. The key witness against him confessed multiple times to being the real shooter and even sent a letter to Miller's mother apologizing for lying. The witness David Williams, recanted his statement at Miller's preliminary hearing in 1997 and denied it again at trial a year later but the jury voted to convict Miller anyway. In 2002, Williams wrote according to court documents. Your son had no knowledge of the crime, he wasn't even there! Very sad* Prosecutors did not say Wednesday whether they planned to charge Williams or if they believed his confession that he killed Mullen! Very Sad

But none of it mattered according to Miller's lawyers.
Very sad

The court's denied Miller's appeal, citing procedural errors and alleging that Williams was not believable when he denied his statement and admitted to the crime.

Miller now 44, contacted the Pennsylvania Innocence Project about eight years ago to help with an appeal.

The Philadelphia District attorney's office has agreed with Miller's defense team that his prosecution was flawed and his conviction shouldn't stand. On Wednesday morning, Common Pleas Court Judge Lillian Ransom granted Miller the relief he sought, leading to his release. I understand he went through a lot in there. The hardest time to do in prison is when you know you are innocent nobody is listening and stereotyping. Its female see the Innocence Project and other organizations

Organization help me all the time they are freed while the women are neglected. I am in prison because I am innocent. I've written every innocent project that I could. I thought I came close to getting the help I need through one innocence project but then they wrote a letter saying they couldn't help me etc. It's always they are small institution can't help so many. Something needs to be done about the stereotyping. Cause a lot of the women case is messed up at Pulaski State Prison and Lee Arndale Prison in Georgia but nobody Want take our cases. We sit here decades until the Parole decide to let us go.
