

(NO WORDS)

WHEN DEALING WITH ACCEPTANCE YOU HAVE TO FIRST COME TO TERM WITH THE FACT THAT YOU DID SOMETHING WRONG, AND THEN YOU CAN START THE PROCCES OF REBUILDING, AND HEALING INSIDE, AND OUTSIDE.

Honestly it sadness that come to mind when i think about Ms. Dax because her life was cut short by me do to my lack of self control, and disregrad for life. However i'm no longer that 18 year old kid, and my entire adult years has been about trying to right the wrong. I understand that nothing i do or say will ever bring back Ms. Dax however i do hope to bring closer to your family. Ms. Dax was a respectful, nice, and pure genuine person who i only knew for a couple weeks, and i'm truly sorry from the bottom of my heart for everything i've put your family through, and everyday i hope that you guys can learn to forgive me.

I do have remorse, and back then what you saw wasn't no remorse it was a kid that had block out emotions due to things that had happen to him in his life. I hate that i was that person, someone capable of taken a life, and only when i was able to accept that the person who sat in that court room was me was i able to start to rebuild, and reform who i was inside, and out. Until you've learnt to love yourself, and cherish your life you can't begin to love or cherish someone elses life. Once that happen i was able to fully understand how my actions effected so many people. I have learnt things about myself that has help me to understand what live inside of me that cause such anger, and hate. I do understand that nothing i say will ever bring back Ms Dax, and yet i do hope what i'm saying gives your family some insight. Any life taken is to much, and thats something that hangs over me forever.

Words really can't explain how i truly feel yet i felt like you deserve to hear the words i do have to say. Forgiveness is the first step, and i hope your family can when ready forgive me. I'll say this before i go my writing is to hopefully reach someone in need that may not have support, and if i can help one person overcome then hopefully one day i could fully forgive myself.

(REAL TALK ALWAYS)

By; Anthony P. Heard Jr