

A Couple of Questions to Ponder

(* Literally :)

Separate post
from the 3pg comic post.

— wonder if I've asked these questions before? (I know I meant to). I don't recall where I first heard them, but I didn't come up with them on my own and they did get me thinking:

#1) Would you rather be a genius in a world full of not-so-bright people (dunces); or would you rather be unintelligent in a world full of geniuses?

#2) Would you rather be stranded on a desert island (or any remote, inescapable place), completely alone; or would you rather be stranded but with one other person — someone you hate?

I have my answers, and I've gotten a few interesting takes from people I've asked around here (all of whom I'm stranded with, among a population of... let's say, relatively homogeneous intelligence 😊). I'd really like to hear your answers, and why you'd answer that way.

Happy Season's Christmas Merry Chanukka Time Greetings!

IF you'd like to send an answer to this, or anything else you might want to say, directly to me, please write:

Haraszewski
A02622 C-Yard
P.O. Box 409060
Ione, CA 95640