After All These Years, I Finally
Had to Say Something About
This One

It was about ten years ago that I first heard of ~~some~~ <sup>people</sup> being threatened with child pornography charges for, get this, taking pictures of themselves. I think that was in New Jersey, a couple of girls ~~sending~~ <sup>texting</sup> pictures of their tits to their boyfriends, who unsurprisingly shared the photos with friends, and pretty soon the school and cops were freaking out... as I recall, the scumbag D.A. ~~made~~ <sup>coerced a</sup> "deal" with most of the teens he'd trapped, offering to reduce their records if they completed some <sup>he'd invented</sup> classes to teach them why they were such awful criminals. I think only one girl refused that "deal", insisting she was not a criminal, and winning against that turd prosecutor in court. She just didn't believe she'd done anything wrong... and she was 100% right.

Later on I learned about the early 2000's travesty/tragedy of Justin Berry, the kid who was raking in thousands of dollars a month before the barbarians with badges threatened him with federal prison, at age 14 or 15, for his years of "producing and distributing child pornography" ... of HIMSELF. So yes, this disgusting cop & court terrorism of teens and tweens has been going on for over 2 decades now, and a new Quarantine-era example just came to my attention this week, fanning the embers of my outrage at this gratuitous anti-sex, anti-youth abuse. Here's what always comes to mind when I read these horror-stories: I wish I was in school today. If some principal or cop came goose-stepping into my 8th Grade English class to squawk about ~~how~~ <sup>how</sup> we "minor" students are forbidden by law from taking and sharing naked pictures of ourselves, I know exactly what I'd do. In anger at the disrespect and violation of my dignity and right to self-determination, I'd tell them, "Go ahead and arrest me then, fuck face." I'd announce that, entirely because they - they who have no right to how I use my body so long as I'm not hurting others - ~~told~~ <sup>told</sup> me I wasn't allowed to, I was gonna go straight to the bathroom and snap a few pics of my testicles then upload them immediately to a site I'd create specifically for the occasion, perhaps called "myballsforofficersmith.com". And I'd promise to post new photos every week. So, come and get me, coppers. That's what I'd say; that's what I'd do. I mean, can you imagine being threatened with criminal child pornography charges, and you're the child?? It's so degrading, insulting. Are any current teens or tweens resisting with indignant defiance?
