

The Breonna Taylor Case

Was a sloppy job by the cops. Out of my 44 years being on earth, staying ^{in Georgia} and then moving to New Jersey. Every one of the people that I know went down for drugs. Their home was surveillance and every move, so when they move in on you. They know you stay there, they hang out there. ~~They~~ Police had you on the street indictment camera we call it. No knock warrants was very rare unless for sure they know the suspect stays there. You don't just go kicking in anybody door. Second when they come usually they alert you they are there. These cops ~~are~~ in this case was inquiring for trouble.

Then you gonna kill a innocent resident and lock up her boyfriend who fined his license gun. Here goes this argument again when is it right for a ~~license~~ license to carry gun citizen to fire it. Second if it ~~was~~ was one of the cop house. Someone comes to their house with a no knock warrant. Says nothing ^{somebody} to kick in their door, they would have fine their gun as well to protect ~~their~~ their love one. ~~The~~ The whole situation is negligence on the cop be half. They need to do something for Breonna's death. If it's a citizen they would have been under the jail.

Written by
Jennifer Johnson