

Love Note

My Dearest Love:

12/7/2020

I'm remembering so well the two of us sailing in the south seas on those long hot summer days we thought would last forever. You were my beautiful mermaid then without the flippers laying on the deck of our little sailing craft for hours in the still <sup>winds</sup> as I sit watching you under the sun mending those canvas sails. I can still see you swimming around the bow during these times of soft winds. What was the name you gave those sand dunes that laid just above the water. The ones we had to toe our little sailing craft over. Our bodies turned the color of gold that summer, while my hair turned the color of wheat yours turned the color of fire, like you had the flames of the sun downing on it. We would lay awake in one another's arms in the heat of the night watching the stars through a clear blue sky. Why we left this paradise I will never understand. We had everything we ever needed there in one another's dreams. Our promise to one another as we parted from this paradise as that one day we would return together. Once again I am working on the hull and repairing the sails. I only await your return my love.

♥ I'll Love You Always &
Forever + Ever
