Love Note

My Dearest Love:

I was out sight-seeing today through the old town of Hanford, it reminded me so much of home. Our hometown of the 1960's. Where the streets were layed out alphabet one way and number streets crossing them. There were stores set up some of them large department stores we got lost in. Stores with mannequin in the window show cases, wedding dresses, suits, and shoes, store fronts displayings of everything. There were cafes, arcades, hair dressers. If we look hard enought we can see us walking on the sidewalks slowly stopping at every store front staring in at the displays. Looking in the windows of all the little cafes and arcades to see if we we there with any of our old friend. Stopping to talk and make plans. Life was so simple for us back then - the world was smaller and it was so easy to hold on to each other hearts. Here we are 60 years later and our love is still growing more with each passing day. Our dreams haven't changed much we still have one another we still remember all the movie theaters and hotels - did you know they had a California Hotel in Hanford. The only thing missing was a little rain.

I'll Love You Always
Forever + Ever
