Its been awhile since i've wrote a piece for my blog, and to all those who were reading hoping to see something new from me i apologize. However, for me its been a battle because in 2020 the end of November i was diagnosed with stage 3 CANCER, and i was given a week to live, but i'm still here 5 months later on my last round of CHEMO, and hoping that the CANCER is gone.....

I see life so different now, and i have no more time to waste on stupid things, and things that don't matter because life is to short to stay stuck in the past still trying to change the things that can't be change, and we can only hope to make a better future to be a better person as a whole.....

This whole situation has made me a stronger man, and has given me the strength to fight through anything thrown my way because i know now that i'm strong enough to fight off anything that is thrown my way. I always thought i was strong but physical strength wasn't what got me through this CANCER situation, and it was instead my mental strength that got me through this life ending situation because without it i would've gave up awhile back when this first started because it was hard for ~~xxxxxxx~~ me to have to deal with situation because no one in my family has delt with anything like this before, so for my entirer family this was a fight that we all had to fight together.....

See in life when we are put through situations that tests us, and our faith, strength, and willingness to fight we either stand tall, and strong or we give up. As you can see i'm still here fighting, and living.....

To all those out there fighting CANCER i say stay strong, and keep fighting because you can make it through this you just have to believe in yourself, and your strength because your not alone i'm fighting this fight with you all.....
