DEAR MARISSA:

With these written words, I send you my Greetings and Salutations! My attention was captured by your inspiring words, and my spirits were lifted by your radiant positivity. I appreciate you for taking out precious moments of your time to dazzle me with your thoughts, and extending an invitation for friendship and camaraderie. I fully embrace the idea of receiving the "ART of SOULMAKING: The path to unconditional freedom", and establishing correspondence with a volunteer correspondent. To be seen and heard by those on the outside, is medicine for the mind and soul. Prison is home of the forgotten, so it's always a great feeling of elation to be remembered.

"House of Destruction" was written to provide insight into the construction, of a destructive place (prison). The rawness of my words comes from my pain, and my pain resonates from all of the dreary experiences that I have endured. This written piece brings understanding and clarity to the destruction that prison causes. This place extinguishes souls, eradicates spirits, and erodes minds. This is what it was designed to do.

I cannot undo my harrowing experiences, all I can do is create better ones. I look forward to embarking on this journey with you toward improvement.

PEACE -N- BLESSINGS,
Troy
