Compassion Prison Project

A2

Dear Michael Singh,

Apologies for the delay in getting back to you. There are too many letters to respond to and too much work to be done right now. Here is the latest poem: Lost and Profound. I can't make corrections right now too much going on!

I want to say you're a brave man, and you're seeking the truth. And the truth will set you free. You know that. So basically, you are free. You're just in a building that they won't let you out of. But your mind is free, Michael, and I applaud you for that. I know it gets you into trouble, but that's the path you've decided to take. I truly understand that.

Just so you know right now, we won't be in much contact until Trauma Talks is over. If you do write, we'll put your letter in a pile, and we'll get back to it as soon as production is done, which could take about two or three months. So, I hope you don't mind the interruption. Just know you're a compassionate ambassador, you always will be.

I look forward to corresponding with you in the near future. And thank you for permission to use your poem. If one of the actors chooses it, you'll be on video in a prison curriculum video!

Okay, my dear. Take care.

Kind regards,
