At a telehearing today, Eastern District of Wisconsin U.S. District Court Judge Lynn Adelman agreed to find an attorney to represent me for Case #19-CV-255, Lindell v. Cpt. VanLanen, which is going to trial regarding my claim that the Cpt. ordered and his underlings went along with an unjustified strip search during which a guard made sexually degrading remarks while I was chained, naked, to the strip cage door. This was done because I'd been complaining about staff ignoring the mental health needs of a neighbor who'd been left with nothing in a suicide-watch ("Obs. Status") cell for over a month and because I'd been posting exposés about prison conditions online.

Other than being busy working on my lawsuits (seven total), it's boring in here. More than 23 hours a day are spent in my cell, because the administration constantly concocts excuses for denying us recreation (e.g. someone on another unit slapped someone, staff need training, staff called in sick, the weather's bad, our feelings are hurt...).
