

TO MY READERS

In the past i have written alot of offensive articals. But i think that it be of an honest content. Yes! I have alot of issues, with other races. I guess it is because I am on the lines sort of speaking. Maybe it is because I just do not like people that are differnt in the way they act, Or in the way that they talk. What ever it is I like the idea that I am able to be honest with these emotions while over half the population will not be honest in thier thoughts and scared to let others know that they too think thoughts that are considered mean or racist. There lies the real probalem, people try and ignore these thoughts. They need to relize that they are part of the human experience³. There is nothing wrong with being differnt. Do you have that right to think highly of your skin color, or should let other races dictate to you how you are to feel? Should you not be proud of your skin color and to march in a parade of all the same skin color-especially if your not hurting any one. Prehaps it is going back into the past that everyone likes to look back at-when the klan used hateful massages instead of just celebrations that they are white people. What would happen if white people just gathered together just to celbrate thier Heritage. How would other rances veiw that???????