Excerpt from my Book: STRIVING TO BE A FAILURE, The Reality of Gangs
Jail Cells and Coffins (AVAILABLE ON AMAZON)

A senior member of a gang who was known for having a lot of money from the drugs he sold sat in his living room watching the monitor from the camera he had outside of his front door; he saw two of his fellow gang members approaching his door so he got up to let them in. These two members were good friends of his, and members of his gang, that he knew very well. So seeing them at his front door did not alarm him. When he opened the door and turned to walk away, one of his fellow gang members shot him in the back of his head, killing him instantly. They then went on to ram sack his house, taking money and drugs, and then even attended his funeral a few weeks later. As you can see, there is no trust, friends, nor loyalty in gangs. . .
