

The Jewelry that has lost its diamonds

Rhetorical deceitfulness v. the truth

Is this a social problem, technology issue or people problem

Have you ever bought a cheap piece of jewelry with fake diamonds. You don't know why you keep purchasing this jewelry. All you know it look ~~good~~ and feels good on you. That is the Rhetorical deceit part of the ideal that it looks good but the truth of the matter its not worth bargaining because its not going to last. Here the truth, if I want real jewelry, I would invest the money and time to find the best. So we as a nation, government, State, local etc. Has to Stop taking the cheap way out through ~~the~~ policymaking and local standards in policing that makes our government look good but don't have no substance behind what we call the perfect laws. It's only enlarging our social problems process. For instances, banning fictions, Why their is no perfect technology - just like their is no perfect person in the world. Just like we don't have to deal with someone - we don't have to get on the websites. Nobody is obligated to purchase apps, because choosing to ~~be~~ on social media is a choice. I understand that humans are choose to violate others privacy. But handle those individual on a personal bases. When we make it a larger problem and start effecting all consumer who really enjoy using the company service. You try to take that joy from them that is not right. I am tired of people playing victims everywhere we turn in the world today. I chose to buy that cheap jewelry How could I complain about the company I bought from when I knew they sold cheap jewelry. Rhetorical deceitfulness when I knew the truth but I choose to get over into conspiracy theory or justify why a thing is wrong even though lies with the individuals. or person. Internet and technology has its flaws people. But it cannot ~~function~~ function without people using it. I am not saying when you buy these apps they don't offer the best service. Pick and choose your Dattle, people wisely. I am saying customers has a choice and stop victimizing this service about filters (tiktok) because you chose to use it. Secondly why are we allowing our children so much internet time? Balance your children time and teach them how to balance time in different ways. So when they do get older they won't spend a lot of time on the internet. My children is grown

The live a blalance life when it comes to the internet. In life we gamble with our chances of running into problems sometimes because we don't know how to balance internet use ~~and~~ or technology for the most I don't believe TikToks should be banned. If this service isn't for you or you feel "you had a bad experience, just stay off. Don't ruin it for the other customers who enjoy Tic Toc Service. This is not a social problem its a people problem.
