Today I went before the Board Of prison parole Commissioner.

They were hard on me.

I went into the meeting knowing that I would not get any sympathy toward parole I needed to know what they thought of me.

I think that their clarity of me has put me on the right tract.

Being a sex offender is not an easy road map to follow.

For me all the way up to now has been my safety first.

So I have been very elusive in taking part in therapy classes in the past.

But this prisons structure offers something that I can use to get a sex offenders program going whereas in the past that was not possible.

Those road blocks are kind of lifted.
