Finally I seeing CDCR staff acting more humane to the inmate populations.
I have been in prison since 1991. There was no rehabilitation programs in the 90's I can positively seen a new way that they are treating us.
We for thing are given a voice within the tablet that they have provided.
There are a lot of good functions that this device and freedoms it provides for us.
So many good things are starting to happen.
Its crazy but welcomed where love was definitely missing.
Being kind changes lives at at least it helps inmates to be positive about their futures.
I got to admit I was very sceptical at first when reforms started coming in, with a mind set that zebras do not change their stripes.
Yes their are always going to be those that resist.
Unfortunately that will always remain until they too fall flat on their faces, just like I did.
Any ways My hat comes off to The CDCR for starting to get it right to rehabilitate its inmate population.
