Hi GN22!

Doing the math, it appears you answered my last comment reply on about July 7th, 2024. Sound right? It's a slow process, but it does seem that my replies to commenters are being seen more often than they were in years past. In the first few years I pretty religiously replied to every comment I got, and no one (save 2 ppl) ever wrote back. I guess many of them just left the platform altogether. Who knows? Anyway, I'm really happy you saw my last one and enjoyed it. I'm glad the things I post let you learn a bit about me — and that it's not all bad! ☺

As far as myself and "many others on this site" being in "such horrible situations"... I don't think anyone who blogs here is not in a horrible situation. Some don't quite realize it, but still, every prisoner is a hostage of the state (that is, the government, be it Federal or more local), and that condition itself is an irremediable horror. Whatever their views, I stand in solidarity with all prisoners as prisoners. We're all in the same boat, even if some insist on paddling in other directions, poking holes in the floorboards, or hitting their fellow captives on the head with their oars.

I wish I could share even a grain of your confidence that things will be better. As it is, I fear they may get much, much worse in the near future. We'll see.

Meanwhile... I hope you had a chance to look at those 2 posts I mentioned. I only brought them up because you wrote something about wanting to read "Damn, Bat's Unfortunate." Love to hear your thoughts, if you get time to read them.

Hey, by the way... can I ask where you're from? Not specifically where, but what country, or even just whether you are either in or out of the U.S.? I've noticed for awhile that the majority of commenters seem to be from outside the U.S., so I'm asking anyone who hasn't already said. No worries either way, just ignore that I asked if you'd rather not answer. I won't ask again. ☺

Take care, GN XXII. Thanks for commenting, transcribing, and just being you!

Sincerely,

Dymitri
