

SALE

poplar lined street
receding into the distance

Posting for <http://betweenthebars.org/blogs/339/>

May 13, 2025

This crayon painting, "poplar lined street receding into the distance" is titled because I don't remember the title Van Gogh gave it, (famous street somewhere in France written in French) and I don't have the book with the picture anymore cause its a reference book that's not supposed to leave the library; I had special temporary permission to borrow it. So I did it from memory, so its not accurate. Plus ~~Van~~ Van Gogh did it when the foliage was orange and brown in autumn. And Van Gogh didn't include the above ground stone tombs arranged on the sides, so I didn't either.

I do wish I could oil paint on canvas again; bad, and other things not allowed in here that are entirely legal out there. Harrumph!

JA

James Riva w38533
0ccc
1 Administration Rd.
Bridgewater, MA 02324