"IGNORANT TO INNOCENCE, BLIND TO JUSTICE"

Your message was eloquently written and your word usage is remarkable, but it is missing the identity of who you are. Knowing who you are, will convince all of those who agree and support you that you are solid and brave. Unfortunately, you remain well hidden behind your computer screen. Tucked away safely like a rabbit in its hole, a bee in its hive, a turtle in its shell, a bird in its nest. Anyone could remain well hidden behind a keyboard and computer screen and convey thoughts, but to truly be impactful and to move the masses beyond measure, it is important for you to get out from behind your computer screen and stand tall, solid, and strong behind your message. Reveal who you are, your message will resonate much better this way.

However, your message is very powerful despite your false assertions of me being a monster. I am in fact a compassionate person and am indeed saddened by Ms. Moore's death, but I am not responsible for her death. My proclamations of innocence has never wavered and it never will. You can rant, rave, and attempt to "bully" me into owning guilt for something that I am innocent of, but you will never get the results that you so desperately yearn for. You are one of many who is caught up in the cycle of lies and exaggerations by police (most but not all), prosecutors, and media outlets. You foolishly believe everything that they spew. You are dazzled by their lies, deception, and false contentions, and because of this you will forever remain ignorant to innocence, and blind to true justice.
