

What Color Clothes Makes you feel vibrant? (PART 1)

Tony Crisp, who has written extensively about dreams in his Dictionary titled "Dream Dictionary" An A To Z ~~Guide~~ Guide To Understanding Your Unconscious Mind. Crisp expresses that clothes can be the stance or attitudes we use to meet other people or special situations, such as work or danger; self protection, such as might arise from one's feelings of reserve, shyness, anxiety or aggressiveness used in fending off sexual or other advances; clothes can depict self respect and how we see ourselves in society - the difference between what we want and what we feel others want of us; when we consider their color, our clothes can also express our emotional condition and moods. Constance Newland gives the example of dressing in violent symbolizing being in ~~violence~~ violate sexually.

On the other hand, Rose Turner, a fashion psychologist at the London College of Fashion, studies the impact clothing has on how people think, how they behave, and even how clothes affect their mood. As the Closest thing to our bodies, clothing forms a type of "second skin" and girds us for whatever the day might hold. For example, donning professional attire can "help with motivation and concentration" at work, and wearing vintage pieces with ~~set~~ sentimental value can bring comfort during stressful situations.

I strongly agree that the color of clothing I choose or a person wears can dictate the vibe that is created in the atmosphere. For instance, I love all colors of camouflage. In the military world camouflage is used to hide by disguising themselves from their enemy. In my view, when I wear or see the material, I see victory, ^{and} a soldier that is fighting spiritual warfare. Everyone is battling something. Just lately, I been battle my daughter being TEU and struggling.

When I see American soldier in ~~camouflage~~ camouflage, knowing they are daily fighting dangerous allies. Some has made it through the battle coming out victorious. The material of clothing makes me feel like a soldier and victorious. I love camouflage so much till I have a passionate trend that I believe would be the perfect

Storm of clothing line. Camouflage and fur line. Secondly, I love fur because it so soft and gentle. Any color would brighten my day. You can lay on fur, it brings so much peace and calmness to a stressful situation.

The colors of your clothes can put someone in a good mood. There is this staff member that works at facility. She always have on colors like red, yellow, purple, and turquoise just to name a few. Even if I am in a bad mood. When she comes around my mood change to calmness and peacefulness. Because her clothes and shoes stand out. She dictates people moods by what she is wearing for that day.

How do you feel about this subject?
What color clothes makes you feel vibrant?

Written by
Jennifer Johnson