Email To My Daughter

Good Morning Baby Girl,

Surprise - I'm still here waiting on you to grow up ! It seems like it is taking forever though, or maybe I just had to high of expectations ... I gave you a lot of credit for at least opening your door - while your dumb ass brother continues to hide behind his ! So, you are my daughter (let's say biologically speaking) and mutually recognize the void in time that separated us - do you truly believe that was my fault ? How many times will I have to apologize for not being the father you deserved and needed me to be ? Only - that is a catch 22 - since why can't you be the daughter I need and want you to be ? I understand your childhood emotions of abandonment - I wasn't there when you needed me - but why can't you understand the pain I suffer too - because I wanted to be there and couldn't ?!?

We have been given the opportunity to put the past behind us and restart our Father / Daughter relationship - I love the fact I have two grown grandchildren and am a great grandfather ... Please stop shutting me out of your and their lives - or at least explain your rational for doing so !

My door is open Rosie - and you are not a helpless child - I am proud of what you have achieved ! With that - Love to you and for you - your Dad - One Eagle xo